A BRIGHT SPOT IN TOUGH TIMES

You've seen the headlines. Cuts in everything from refugee support to public radio and TV. With billions of dollars leaving the social sector through government cuts, the impact is wide-ranging.

Meanwhile, demand and need are up. All of our programs are full, or close to it. Our food pantry serves more and more families every month—up to an average of 700 per month. Kid programs are busting at the seams. We are serving more people across all program areas, and helping them reach for a brighter future. You can see in the pages that follow the incredible results we are achieving with families.

Put these conditions together and it is a very tough time for organizations like Neighborhood House. But you of all people know how important our work is.

We run all sorts of programs here, creating brighter futures through early childhood education, family programming, and student support. But we know, and you know, that programs and services—as important as they are—don't change lives.

Relationships change lives—the commitment and support from the people who know you, who encourage you to dream big, and who help you achieve those dreams.

The real magic of Neighborhood House is in the relationships we have with our members and families.

So even in these hard times, Neighborhood House is a bright spot, full of joy and opportunity. We are working hard to keep that spirit alive, and we appreciate your support.

Best,

Jennie Jean Davidson, Executive Director

MEET ARIEUS

Arieus is five years old and a member of the Stallions preschool class in the Child Development Center. Arieus enjoys creating and building when in the classroom and racing his classmates while out on the natural playground.

Arieus and his family enjoy spending quality time together during paint and sip and family science nights in the Child Development Center.

LEARNING, PLAYING, & GROWING

Kindergarten readiness starts in the Child Development Center. Here, infants, toddlers, preschoolers, and their families enjoy year-round quality childcare focused on setting up kids to succeed inside and outside of the classroom.

Chase is 18 years old and a member of the Pathways Program. During his time at Neighborhood House, Chase has had the opportunity to tour colleges & trade schools, learn from industry professionals, and explore the outdoors through rock climbing and horseback riding.

Chase graduated from high school last spring & is now a freshman at Kentucky State University studying physical science.

DREAM BIG, ACHIEVE BIGGER

Designed for teens and young adults ages 16-24, the Pathways Program at Neighborhood House gives young people opportunities to develop leadership skills, learn critical life skills, and explore the things they are passionate about. In 2025, Pathways premiered its first summer program, offering four weeks of workshops and field trips to members. They harvested vegetables with the Food Literacy Project and learned financial literacy and budgeting skills.

VOLUNTEERS POWER THE PANTRY

As the only food pantry in Louisville's west end open five days a week, the Emergency Food Pantry at Neighborhood House is able to serve more than 700 families a month thanks to support from volunteers.

Volunteers like Mike and Velma and those from organizations like Stantec and Park Community Credit Union greet families as they enter the pantry, sort through deliveries of fresh produce, and restock shelves.

FUELING STRONG FAMILIES

Traffic in the Emergency Food Pantry continues to rise. With the integration of a shopping model in 2024, families continue to enjoy selecting their own pantry staples, produce, and frozen meat. Out of families surveyed, 100% reported that they received healthier food options from our pantry.
